PRESS RELEASE

Advisense Releases Sustainability Report for 2024 - Focused on Building Sustainable and Resilient Organisations

Advisense today published its 2024 Sustainability Report, marking another year of progress in embedding environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations across the business.

The report demonstrates how Advisense supports clients through high-quality Governance, Risk and Compliance (GRC) advisory, integration of ESG and climate-related risks and through our dedicated sustainability advisory services. It also highlights how we're strengthening environmental management, advancing social sustainability, and maintaining strong standards of business conduct and integrity. The report is based on our second group-wide double materiality assessment, providing a clear picture of areas where our impact as a company is greatest, and where we still have work to do.

"Our advisory work within governance, risk and compliance plays a central role in supporting clients on their sustainability journeys," says Christine Ehnström, Group CEO at Advisense. "This is where our expertise creates the most value: helping organisations operate responsibly and build long-term resilience."

Although the timeline and scope of the EU sustainability reporting rules are evolving under the EU Omnibus proposal, Advisense has maintained its momentum. We have used this period to reinforce our internal systems, define strategic sustainability priorities and strengthen our sustainability advisory services.

"We see the Omnibus regulation as a reminder to stay focused," says Annik Cecilie Saxegaard Falch, Head of Group Sustainability at Advisense. "Even as the regulatory landscape shifts, the expectations from clients and society remain as strong as ever. This report reflects how we're continuing to meet those expectations while preparing ourselves and our clients for what comes next."
